PEER LED LEARNING

If the aim of education is to prepare students for their lives, then one of the key skills they need is leadership. Not all leaders are academically gifted, most are practically capable and lead by example. This hands-on course will show delegates how every student they teach can lead at certain times. With an emphasis on groupwork and respect, the course will show how both the most and least able can be supported, challenged and developed by their opportunity to lead.
